

New Jersey's Do-Not-Call law has drastically improved the quality of life for me and my family. If states wish to enact stricter laws than those provided on the federal level, what gives the FCC the power to prevent them from doing so?